Free to Live

by Eunice E. Frimpong

PRESS RELEASE

Refreshing and uplifting collection of poems delivering a message of freedom in life and faith in times of adversity.

I'll touch, Cultivate delight. Allure,
Salivate the urge. Awakening,
I'll enter in.

Floating...
Erupting...
Take it slow.
Delve into,
Flow through the unknown.

Explore you, Intricate you. Pursue, Into, Crevices—you. Two as one Breakthrough.

Wife, arrive,
A multifarious mountain find, Come.

Lovingly composed to anchor souls, Indenture: Free to Live by Eunice E. Frimpong explores far-ranging themes including wealth, addiction and purpose to challenge our perceptions of enslavement in the present era. These poems are designed to reveal dimensions of a pressing contract, with the promise of enlightenment and poetic reflection in times of unrest that will connect strongly with readers of faith.

About the author: Originally born in Ghana, Eunice E. Frimpong came to live in London as a child. She attended the University of Manchester and abroad at the University of Missouri where she studied history and became more involved in her Christian faith.
