

The Elephant of Frimley

By Nicholas Rawls & Illustrated by Louise Jewell

PRESS RELEASE

Two sisters and an elephant embark on an exciting adventure in this charming illustrated children's book.

After the discovery of an elephant in their back garden, sisters Hannah and Emily make it their adventurous mission to return it back home.

Originally written as a bedtime story for his two daughters, and beautifully illustrated by Louise Jewell, The Elephant of Frimley is a delightful and fun read that parents, primary school teachers and extended families will enjoy sharing with young children.

About the author: Retired and happily living in Farnborough, Surrey, Nicholas Rawls enjoys spending time chatting on-line with his grandson and five adult children who are scattered across the world. When he's not writing poetry and children's verse he can be found pursuing his other interests —from antique fountain pen restoration to stamp collection, amateur astronomy and learning to play the banjo. His debut children's book The Elephant of Frimley (published by Clink Street Publishing 25th April 2017 RRP TBC paperback) is available to purchase from online retailers including amazon.co.uk and to order from all good bookstores.
